THE WAY YOU DRAW MANGA IS SOMETHING LIKE THIS!

4 MANUSCRIPT EDITION ②

- Generally speaking, the only physical work involved in drawing a manuscript is with your hand, so you can keep drawing a long time without getting much sleep. Stuff like drawing the name is the kind of work your brain needs to be running on all cylinders for, so you really don't wanna be working on no sleep for that. Though I haven't been able to pull all-nighters much lately myself, either...

You really want to sleep an absolute minimum of 3 hours per day. This is a bit of a side-tangent, but apparently lack of sleep makes one more susceptible to mouth ulcers, for some reason. Though once your work is done, get some serious sleep and they'll heal in no time... (Haha)

Okay then, first off you do the under-sketch. But in my case, I don't make the name into a manuscript as-is, so when I'm at the under-sketch stage, I tend to work on continuing to improve any section I think needs it. That way the final manuscript ends up as perfect as possible.
